

financial barriers and cultural stigma. For instance, only one third of African-Americans in need of mental health services actually receive them.

Among Hispanic Americans with a mental disorder, fewer than 1 in 11 contact mental health specialists, while fewer than 1 in 5 contact general health care providers. Among Hispanic immigrants with mental disorders, fewer than 1 in 20 use services from mental health specialists, while fewer than 1 in 10 use services from general health care providers.

Of Asian-Americans who report needing mental health services, half of them do not receive them because they cannot find a provider who speaks their language.

There is a serious lack of mental healthcare providers, and an even greater lack of minority providers, who are more likely to practice in communities with high minority populations.

We must invest more in our mental healthcare system in order to prevent suicide. We need more psychiatrists and psychologists. We need to screen all of our children for mental health problems and suicide risk factors. And when our children exhibit symptoms of mental illness—such as withdrawal from family and friends, academic trouble, sadness or behavioral problems—we must make sure they get the appropriate treatment immediately.

Mrs. NAPOLITANO. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.
